ABOUT US

CSVANW represents the broadest and most unified voice in advocating and collectively addressing violence against Native women and children across our region. An alliance of more than 50 passionate, distinguished and highly committed organizations and individuals, CSVANW's membership works aggressively to raise awareness about the public safety of Native women and children at the state, tribal and federal levels.

As a tribal coalition, CSVANW does not provide emergency or direct services. If you are in an unsafe situation or need immediate assistance, please dial 911.
